The Future Unraveled

In the year 2056 there will be many changes in society and everyday life. In the year 2026 a group of the best physicists and chemists will team up together to solve the problem of global warming. The most prominent scientists of the world were in this meeting. In order for these scientists to meet up like they did there needed to be something established. What all the world leaders decided was that there should be a type of agreement between all of the countries. It was determined that the World Federation Act would be created. This act basically asked for world peace because this act did not allow other countries to attack other countries. This brought all humanity together against a greater “evil” which is the deterioration of the ozone layer. All of these brilliant minds came up with a twenty-year plan to change human lifestyle in its entire form.

This plan involved multiple energies working together in a multi-step fashion that would slowly change humanity. The first step would be to find an energy source to drive a new technological machine. This source had to be easily found and abundant; these scientists decided that thermal energy would be the most appropriate. They made thermal plants that were scattered all over the world. This process would take ten years to build and become fully functioning. Then the scientists needed another energy source to combine with the thermal energy. They decided that more hydroelectric plants would be made around the world. Now that they had to create a new technology that had perpetual motion, which was the problem, they had to face. One of the scientists stated that the only thing that would go on forever and not stop, only fade, is light. With this idea they were in process of making what would be known as the light engine. This light engine was capable of perpetual motion and with the two previous energy sources there would be enough energy to power the world.

The solution came too late and the ozone was deteriorated to a much higher extent and could not have been fixed. The same group of scientists came up with a machine that would terra form Mars. The process of terra formation would take about twenty years to completely turn Mars into a flourishing ecosystem. In order for the machines to be shipped from Earth to Mars a new variation of the light engine would be needed to decrease the amount of time a trip to Mars would take. Once the ecosystem was finished in Mars they started to put humans on Mars.

This is what will happen in fifty years from now. There will be no more humans on Earth, the humans will be on Mars and there will be world peace with out any disease and every one lived happily ever after.

I hope you enjoyed that piece of fiction; but this was the plan in the past and now the future has taken a different turn into the macabre.

In 2010 World War III started and it was what they called a Nuclear Holocaust. The political “super powers” were battling each other, mainly with nuclear warfare. With the ozone layer deteriorating, every second of this war completely put the ozone to a critical stage. Five years later this war was still ongoing and it looked like everyone was going to die. The human race would cease to exist because of the radiation of the aftermath of the weapons of mass destruction. But the worse was still to come; it would stop this war and all wars to come forever. With a weaken ozone; there was no escape from UV rays that radiated from the sun. This caused a great and destructive heat. The polar caps melted because of all the heat the water flooded most the main lands and the main lands that were not flooded were on fire because of all the heat. The water on the surface was boiling hot some say you could see the smoke coming from lakes and oceans. To survive the humans had to go underground and had to make a new system of survival and rules that were human life will be like in forty years.

This struggle had been going on for ten years. Currently most people are dying of hunger and disease. The contemplation of suicide is common, which is natural when you have been in isolation for ten years. Most people are just going crazy thinking of how Earth was with its blue sky and the smell of a summer morning with the dew on the grass wetting your shoes. Well at least that what most of the people would say because unfortunately I have never seen the outside. All I have ever known and seen are these caves because I was born in these caves. The thing is... there is nothing to do down here to do but read books next to the fire and imagine how it used to be. All I try to do is to find a ways to make things like they used to be so I can feel like it used to be before the war. The caves that we have currently inhabited for the past 40 years are vast and they internally connect with other caves that connect throughout the entire planet. These caves go deeper than the vastest part of the ocean.

Most of the people in 2056 are suffering of malnutrition, which is inevitable because the food available to most people is meat but others, the more fortunate, (the upper class) have some vegetables to eat that are grown with solar light bulbs. The variety of food is very scarce. The water we drink is too warm to consume immediately so we have pots to cool of the water from the underground geysers. The Earth is on fire and flooded. There is no possible way we could go outside because it would be complete suicide. At least that is what they tell us? Believe or not there is a government down here, or at least that is what they call themselves “The Order” in the mess that society is currently in. In reality they are just a group of thugs that run things to their convenience and anyone who does not follow their rules mysteriously disappears. One of the biggest rules is that we can't go anywhere near the exit to the surface. Most people are happy with what they have but some are fueled by their memories and the memories of others. It is my curiosity made me determined to see the wreckage of the Earth's surface.

Since I was born all I have done is to read and research different ways to make a type of suit that would allow me to survive in the intense heat for sixty seconds. This will be more than enough time to take a look at what once was. The only problem with my research was that there were two missing pages from my manuals. I never gave the two missing pages thought until I needed it to make this suit. Who would rip up these specific pages? It's too coincidental, so I went to ask my father who had previously owned the books and he responded a young boy named Jsanzo Dacimi. I asked were he could be found and my father said that he got in some trouble with The Order and he fled 11 years ago. I went to The Order and asked Bruno, the leader of The Order, if he knew what ever happened to this person. He replied rudely “ that fool took off before we could do anything about it” when I started walking out of the entrance of the Order one of the maintenance workers stopped me and told me that the last time that anyone has very seen this person was 50 vectors north east which means that 25 caves north east. I set off for my journey to find this missing person. All I could think of was that this person is evil. He must be, I kept imagining him as a villain form one of the characters of my books and the one that came to mind was The Emperor from Star Wars, which was a book I enjoyed very much.

Once the textures of the walls of the caves started to change I knew I was there so I started asking questions about this person. Eventually they pointed me to the guild bum. When I first found him he looked unhealthy and shagged. When I started to explain my dilemma to this hobo he started to smile. That smile put me over the edge and I yelled at the top of my lungs “WHY DID YOU RIP THE PA”! Even before I could finish the sentence he explained that it wasn't him that ripped the pages, The Order ripped the pages and confiscated them. He explained that this is why he had to leave town. They said that he was too smart for his own good. He had those two pages memorized but the years have been cruel and have made me forget but he explained that the order keeps confiscated materials in their main base and the two pages should be there. I ran back and went straight to The Order but I went to the maintenance person that helped me before and asked if he cleaned inside the evidence area. He replied, “yes” so I asked him that if he could take these two pages out and he said with no problem he gave me those pieces of paper and I ran home to attach it to the instructions.

In order for me to make this suit I needed to get a standard cloth and rare types of dirt mixed with hot water and pour it on the clothing then wait until it was dry. For this suit of mud I needed to fill three pails with dirt. I was lucky it gave a description of where to find it and what it looked like. It was orange dirt found two hundred feet below the bottom of the ocean and I knew that finding the dirt would be a journey on its own. It took me three days to get to the dirt. Just before I went to pick up the dirt someone stopped me it as the local tribe leader sort of how a mayor of a town acts like or so I read. He said that if I needed to the dirt that I needed to do something for him and that was to teach him something that he dose not know. I decided to teach him a skill that would entertain him for hours I showed him how to play baseball because one of the books I found showed me how to play. It could be played we a lot of people or just alone, which was perfect. The tribe leader let me take the dirt back to my home and I started to create the suit, one day later I was done.

Now I needed a way to distract the guards at the gate leading to the exit, but how? I read in one of the novels I read a magician used smoke to create an illusion that he was able to disappear but truly he was the smoke as a cover to escape. I looked up an old book of magic tricks and it had instructions on how to make a smoke screen. It showed two pebbles that that looked the same that he found in on the floor of the caves and on the cave walls. Then I took the suit and the pebbles and headed for the exit I smashed the pebbles on the floor and it created a massive amount of smoke and he ran towards the gate he passed by the guards and opened the doors. Now the guards knew that he was there he ran the guards ran after him and he sees a faint light at the end of the tunnel. Since I was young I could run faster than the guards and when I got outside it was nothing like I ever imagined. The skies were blue and there was green grass and there were people living on the outside. Knowing it was all a lie I kept running and came to the conclusion that there was a reason for his people to live in extreme conditions for ten years I stopped so they would catch up to me and I asked only one question ... WHY?

The guards took me to a large building where everything was glowing. It was something I had never seen. All the people and the walls were glowing and I asked the guards why are they all glowing are we in heaven? The guard responded “no” all of these people are wearing white and I ask what is white and he responded it’s a color he never spoke a gain until we reached a familiar color, red. It was a larger red door and on the inside there was a man. This man was tall and intimidating he stood up from what looked like a lion or tigers mouth shaped throne. He started to walk toward me and the guards left me I knew that these were my final hours. With a surge of courage I said why are there people who believe that the earth is in total wreckage and are living in deplorable conditions. The only thing he said with a voice that brought chills to my skin was that for a perfect society to become real not just something that you would find in a book the violent and the poor couldn’t belong. We decided to stage a nuclear holocaust to have a perfect society. “Some sacrifices must be made for a greater future”, he responded and with all the hate for them I had I knew in one form or another that he was right I knew that I would never see the cave or the light of the beautiful sun, these were my last moments on Earth. After he said this he asked me how did I get the courage to come out of the cave knowing the consequences and knowing that if I told him the book I read through my life were the reason that another person would not be able to experience the joy a book can bring you. I responded that there was nothing else to do and that I was bored. He pulled out a gun, or at least that is what it looked like, because the guns I have seen are illustrated in western cowboy books. All that went through my mind was how beautiful the sun and the sky were, I closed my eyes and I woke up in a room with a red door and I asked where I was and where did I come from and this woman who looked like she was so kind dressed like an angel said you are home my child. I asked if she was my mother and she said “yes”.

Complete and utter division of the unworthy and the worthy, a separation of "Good and Bad". A utopia that has taken out its parasite a leech so to speak.

Know matter what the cause a utopia must be perfect in all aspects.

This is what the world is now society is split there may be no cave but there is a distinct difference and some sort of isolation in that matter and this story is just a small part of today but at a much larger scale of what the world will come to in fifty years.

After word

In my research I found out that there were some scientists that believed that there are holes in the ozone layer. I found that the issue of the deterioration of the ozone layer is more serious that everyone is paying attention to. I decided to base my story on what would happen if these gaps in the ozone layer were larger. Also, during my research I found different types of energy sources I asked myself if the problem is that serious why aren't they using these new sources. I came to a conclusion that the reason why is money and politics. So I also decide to incorporate politics and society in my story. In the start of the story I had what I called a "Light Engine", which is of my creation. It would cost billions of dollars to make and scientist from all over the world would need to help in the construction of this machine. The "Light Engine" would be capable of perpetual motion, which I think is the only solution to any energy source that we might need in the future. These are the things I learned about the research on the Ozone Layer and new Energy Sources and how it is all controlled by money and politics this is why my story is shaped like it is.
